WEST SIDE EVENTS.

Thoughtless Young Men Tore Down the American Flag and Thereby Involved Themselves in Trouble.

The regrettable action of two West Side young men yesterday morning in tearing down an American flag in front of P. F. Taylor's hotel, 1117 Jackson street, was briefly reported in yesterday's Tribune. Two of the six young men who were in the party were arrested immediately after the misdeameanor. They save their names as Patrick men who were in the party were arrested immediately after the misdeameanor. They gave their names as Patrick Cawley and Edward Porter. The last named is an Englishman and he has been in the country only three weeks. According to the testimony of Job Whitehouse and J. Hubbard, who were held as witnesses, Porter was in no way guilty of the outrage.

According to them, the person who jumped up and grabbed the flag was Neal Campbell, of Price street, and his companion. Barney McAnulty, who dragged it on the sidewalk. McAnulty and Campbell were in front as the six walked up Jackson street. Following them came Porter and Cawley and afterward came Whitehouse and Hubbard. Campbell jumped at but missed the first flag and when he came under the second he made another leap. His hand clutched the flag and he tore it down. Then, according to the three Englishmen. McAnulty descend the hand clutched the flag and he tore it down. Then, according to the three Englishmen. McAnulty dragged the colors in the dust. When Officer Hart, who was standing on the corner of Jackson street and Main avenue, heard the noise he rushed up toward the men. Campbell and McAnulty ran, the other four halted, Jobe Whitehouse picking up the flag and folded it and Officer Hart then made the arrests mentioned, assisted by Officer Matthews. The two men who are charged with the outrage ran up Jackson street and were not ran up Jackson street and were not captured.

As the officers were escorting Porter and Cawley to the station house Hotel-keeper Taylor, awakened by the loud voices, came out on the street. He de-nounced the perpetrators of the act and was in a mood for violence, as also were the rest of the half dozen men who had gathered.

The three Eng-lishmen gave their testimony and Cawley was held in $200 as a witness. His father became his bondsman. Warrants have been sworn out for the ar-rest of Campbell and McAnulty. The case has attracted great excitement and a lot of feeling on the West Side. Further action against Campbell and McAnulty is threatened.

GOOD AND BAD PAVES.

The paves on Robinsen, Ninth and Jackson streets and on West Lackawanna avenue hill are being rapidly pushed. The pave on the Robinson street route has been finished on the easterly side and the work of paving and rolling on the other side will be immediately commenced. Curb stones are being placed in front of Drayman Brown's residence on Robinson street. Before snow fles all will be ready for the teams. On West Lackawanna avenue hill the pave is nearly completed. In addition to paying particular attention to the correct laying of the blocks, the workmen have adopted a new plan, the suggestion of the contractor. Every twenty feet a break in the bave has been made. A trench is dug and heavy been made. A trench is dug and heavy curb stones, the width of the regular stone blocks, have been imbedded in the dirt to the level of the pave surface. These curb stones stretch entirely across the street and form a strong across the street and form a strong support for the pave. The idea is a good one. The hill is very steep and the pave under ordinary conditions would be liable to slip and become uneven. "breaks" act as a clinch.

LO. THE POOR BICYCLIST!

Arthur Yeager, a blacksmith, living on South Bromley avenue, experienced the delights of a bath in the canal at Shickshinny Sunday afternoon. He was doing a "century" run to Berwick and Nescopeck and in riding homeward along the tow-path of the canal Mr. Yeager's front wheel struck a stump. He was lifted into the air and dropped with a splash into the canal. The wheel came tumbling after. When Mr. Yeager struck bottom he arose to his feet and luckily found the water was not over his head. After a delay and a poking about in the water with a stick, Mr. Yeager fished out his wheel and began the trip to Scranton in anything but a LO, THE POOR BICYCLIST! the trip to Scranton in anything but a comfortable condition.

LIVE FROGS IN ROCKS.

This Old-Time Belief Is Founded Upon Fiction. The fable of the barnacle goose has long ago been discredited and almost forgotten; but other fictions of zoology are longer lived. We often hear to this day that a living frog or toad has been found by quarrymen imbedded in solid rock, where it must have lain since the formation of the rock, countless ages ngo.

These statements have been widely believed, and even men of science have endeavored to account for them by say-ing that the frog and the toad are animals of singular powers of sustaining life under untoward conditions; that they hibernate during each winter, and that on being enclosed in the rock perhaps when actually hibernating they have simply continued their long sleep until the time of their release. Of course, the explanation is absurd; for, even in a state of hibernation, the wear and tear of life, though reduced to the lowest possible amount, still continue, and must within a measurable tinue exhause the animal economy unless nutrition be supplied. Besides, all animals—and the frog is no exception—have a limited term of life, beyond which their existence cannot endure; so that the very idea of an animal's surthat the very idea of an animal's sur-viving under any conditions through a period many thousands of times longer than nature allows to it is simply ab-

No done, frogs have been found by workmen when removing rock from quarries, and no doubt the men have firmly believed that the frogs had been imbedded in the rock; but then, the workmen must have been mistaken. There was no need, therefore, of a cruel experiment to prove what was already certain; but the certainty has never-theless been established by several cru-el experiments. The late Dr. Butland was at pains to bury a number of frogs alive. Some of them were immured in stones; others in plaster; and the result was that none of them survived the second year of their sepulture.—
